DRUM CORPS WINS FIRST HONORS AT F.O.E.CONVENTION

San Mateo county was well represented at the Eagles' convention in San Francisco during the week of August 11 to 16, inclusive. Headquarters which were established at the Whitcomb Hotel were well patronized, many visitors being received and welcomed in San Mateo county's usual hospitable manner.

On Monday evening a public meeting was held in the Civic Auditorium. The principal speaker of the evening was the "Father of the Mother's Day," Frank E. Hering, of South Bend, Indiana. The topic of his speech was the problem of unemployment. Those who were fortunate enough to hear Mr. Hering's address came away much impressed by the speaker's sincerity, and realized that he was very conversant with this topic, so near to his heart.

There were many other notable speakers, including Governor C. C. Young, Mayor James Rolph, Father Bernard, Rabbi Irving P. Reichert, and Former Mayor P. H. McCarthy, and Grand Worthy President Charles Chenu.

At the State Aerie convention on Wednesday, San Mateo county was duly honored by having one of its delegates from Colma-Vista Grande Aerie elected to the office of State Trustee. The newly elected officer is Past President William Bolger.

On Thursday, at 12:30, the grand street parade was held. Mayor H. H. Smith and Councilmen A. J. Bodien, Arthur Dalton, Julius Twesten and Henry Sundermann were participants. A. J. Bodien was marshal of the parade. Other marchers from Daly City, in their white and blue uniforms, were Larry Shaw, H. T. Rolf, E. McGraw, Eric Deibble, Wilbur Sunderland, Dave Campbell, C. Hagel, Tom Zilla, S. Plansky, Arnold Tonsacca.

The following were delegates from Colma-Vista Grande Aerie: A. J. Bodien, Larry Shaw, B. J. Adams, Otto Schramm, E. Heim and William Bolger.

Following the Associated Aerie float which represented San Mateo county, "The Flower Basket of the World," came the Daly City drum corps.

Following the parade a drum corps competition was held in the Civic Center, Daly City again showing the way to the rest of the California drum corps, capturing first prize, with a percentage of 96. Bakersfield was second, Oakland third, Crockett fourth, San Diego fifth, and South San Francisco sixth. South San Francisco's drum corps is the "baby" drum corps of the state, having been but recently organized. They should be given a great deal of credit for the most creditable showing they made.

The members of the Colma-Vista Grande drum corps wish to thank the officers and members of the Aerie and their many friends in Daly City and San Mateo county for the moral support given them during the competition.

The success of this drum corps is largely due to the untiring efforts of their drill master, Captain Finley, who has been with them since the drum corps was organized.

Daly City should be proud of having such a fine organization of young men to represent it, they having won more prizes than all the other drum corps put together at such competitions in the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

The next convention is to be held in Santa Rosa during the second week of June, 1931.

TUNE IN ON KTAB MONDAY EVENING

Monday night, the night before the primary election, between the hours of 8:30 and 9:30 o'clock, Station KTAB in San Francisco is going to broadcast an interesting San Mateo county program. The program will consist of musical, dialogue and other interesting numbers, and there will be important election announcements.

Among the entertainers will be the famous Quinlan brothers of South San Francisco, who are widely known throughout the county for humorous dialogue in dialect. In addition there will be singers well known on the peninsula. The program promises to be one of unusual interest.

One of the most important features of the program will be statements by several candidates seeking office. These candidates have important messages that promise to give you information you should have before making your choice the following day.

Don't forget Monday night, Station KTAB, at the top of the dial, from 8:30 to 9:30 o'clock.

SHOULD VOTE FOR CAPABLE OFFICERS

You are going to the polling booths next Tuesday to exercise the privilege to which you are entitled as the real rulers under our democratic form of government. You have been thinking, discussing, reading about the fitness of the candidates for the various offices coming up at the Primary. We have done our best, in our humble way, in these columns, to be of material assistance to you in coming to your decisions.

You are supreme, you voters, but it is necessary for you to delegate your powers to capable men and women in order to devote your main time to all absorbing activity, making a living and providing for your families, and it is only on election day that you are called upon to come into close touch with the goverment.

Fortunately San Mateo county has office holders at present that make it comparitively easy for the voters in the matter of selecting citizens who will carry out their wishes. We have told you before and the statement well bears repetition:

"Vote for the incumbents."

In your private affairs whenever you find capable men to carry out your desires and plans you do not hesitate to keep them. You do not continually switch from one to an-another. So it should be in the all-important business of YOUR government. Find the right officials and retain them as long as they are willing to serve you.

"Oh, I'll vote in November."

Not many, but citizens here and there are making that remark. They fail to realize that their opportunity is here, right now.

Even for the offices for which there are more than two candidates it is possible to give your choices sufficient votes so they will not need to run at the November election. Give them a majority.

REMEMBER:

The day—Next Tuesday.
The place—Your polling booth.

RESCUES TWO BOYS PINNED UNDER CAR

Edward Lorentzen and Miss Arline Morgan, of Palo Alto, were visitors at the Lorentzen home on Templeton avenue last Sunday, later taking in a show in San Francisco. Driving down the peninsula on their way home, Mr. Lorentzen noticed a car in a ditch, and in passing thought he saw a light. He returned to the place and discovered a wrecked machine, on fire. Two boys were pinned under the machine, and a third had been thrown clear of the wreck. Mr. Lorentzen and Miss Morgan managed to get the boys from under the machine, and all three were carried to safety. Help was sent for and the three injured boys were conveyed to a hospital.

The boys were Arnold Bryon, 18, who suffered a fractured shoulder; John Butwick 16, fractured thigh; and Lawrence Fetterquist, 16, broken pelvis. All the boys reside in San Jose.

TAKE MAN FOR RIDE; RELIEVE HIM OF ROLL

Last Sunday morning at 1:30 a taxi driver, Edward Giubbing, of 1732 Lyons street, San Francisco, was held up and robbed in his taxi at Tenth and Harrison streets, by two bandits, one a young fellow about 19 years of age, and the other a much older man, probably 40 or 45 years old.

The highwaymen robbed their victim of $6, bound and gagged him, and took him for a ride out Mission street to Los Olivos avenue, Daly City, and down to the Southern Pacific tracks, where on the siding was the usual box car. Into this the victim was thrown and left.

History repeats itself. It seems strange that in less than two weeks two men were placed in a similar position by possibly the same assailants.

The victim reported the loss of his taxi and his abduction to Sergeant Hilton, who was on duty. A report of the robbery was made to the San Francisco police about 2 A. M., and was broadcast over the radio.

COUNTY FIREMEN MEET IN DALY CITY

Last Tuesday night the Associated Firemen of San Mateo county held their post-convention meeting at Company No. 5 fire house. The meeting was well attended. Fire Chief Kennedy, Fritz Hansen and Mr. Truax, of South San Francisco, were the principal speakers.

At the conclusion of the business meeting refreshments were enjoyed by all present.

The Pacific Coast Fire Chief's convention will be held in Oakland from September 1 to 5.

LOCAL NINE WINS FOURTH STRAIGHT

The Daly City Merchants turned in another classy teamwork performance last Sunday to defeat the Blum Sweets nine, 6 to 3, on the Rolph diamond. This was the team's fourth straight victory.

Gene Keagle, Marchants' pitcher, is making a habit of defeating the best teams in San Francisco with ridiculous ease. He allowed the hard hitting "candy kids" only eight hits, struck out four batters and walked three. Of the fourteen men to reach first base, Gene left nine stranded.

Daly City spotted Keagle a six run lead in the first two innings. With this margin to work on, Gene pitched strictly defensive ball, conserving his strength and bearing down only in the pinches.

Every member of the local nine gave Bacci, Sweets' pitcher, trouble in the initial frames. Bud Staglich, Ray Doyle and Pat Sloan were especially effective at bat. Bud and Ray garnered two hits each, while Pat connected with a triple to drive across two runs.

George Rettig started the fireworks by hitting a hard grounder to Clancy, third basemean, who booted the ball. George went to second on Plansky's sacrifice hit, stole third and scrambled home on another error by Clacy.

A five run rally in the second stanza brought every local player to bat. Three singles, a triple, a base on balls and two sacrifice hits constituted the barrage.

The Merchants' fielders came through with brilliant support to strangle Blum Sweets' scoring attempts, except in the fifth and the seventh innings. Asnitno, Plansky and Cruchoff turned in exceptionally good catches to choke possible rallies.

Manager Ed Cavagnaro used two new players to fill the previously vacant right field and second base berths last Sunday. Bud Staglich and Frank Asnitino were the classy performers signed for the positions. Their fielding and batting were largely instrumental in bringing about the victory.

With the various high class winter leagues opening in about six weeks, the local nine looks like the team to beat any championship aspirant. The Daly City Merchants' Association will not make a mistake by backing the team. The local fans are boosting this winning aggregation to the limit.

Following is the box score of Sunday's game:

MAKES A GOOD BUSINESS TOWN

There is not a man or woman in Daly City who does not appreciate the importance of Daly City being a good business town. Local business conditions serve as our best barometer of local prosperity. Certainly we all desire to be prosperous. To achive this prosperity it is essential that our neighbors prosper likewise. Practically every person in Daly City is dependent on the other citizens of this community for his individual prosperity. Therefore any movement toward a greater prosperity must be a group movement—a co-operative movement. Our merchants should co-operate in an endeavor to give even better values and better service, and our fellow citizens should reciprocate with their full support.

As a business in Daly City prospers, so does the entire community prosper, for what is good for business is good for the community. Therefore it must be the aim of every resident to see that Daly City not only achieves the reputation of being a good business town, but that it maintains this reputation.

The twelve essential points are the fundamental factors that determine the status of Daly City as a business town. Too great an emphasis can not be placed upon point number one—"That citizens spend their money at home." Unless our citizens do spend our money at home, they are handicapping the possibility of Daly City strengthening its position as a business town.

A study of community development emphasizes the fact that a good business town is not created by accident, but rather by a carefully planned program supported by the residents of the community.

The Community Development Campaign discusses the question of "What Makes a Good Business Town" in this issue of the Record, and presents in a clear and concise form the essential factors. After you have read what is there written, you can judge for yourself where Daly City stands in this repect.

ENGINEER DIES WHILE ON DUTY

The family of P. J. Murray are receiving the sympathy of their many friends in this locality upon his untimely and sudden death. Thursday of last week the Oceanic and Oriental line freighter Golden Tide sailed from San Francisco, and according to radio advices received by the American-Hawaiian Steampship Company, First Assistant Engineer Murray died at sea, 150 miles from San Francisco. The vessel put back to meet the Red Stack tug Sea Ranger on Friday of last week, that left San Francisco at noon with a substitute for Murray. The latter's body was brought in by the Sea Ranger. Murray leaves a wife, Anna, and several children to mourn his loss.

Stepping into the path of au automobile driven by Jack Nan, of 51 Diamond street, last Sunday evening, Miss Emelia Dickson, of 2828 Vallejo street, was hurled with terrific force against a telephone pole. She was rushed to the South San Francisco hospital by Jack Nan in his car.

In addition to this matter which will reach all voters, the Clerk's office will send out the necessary 32,000 official ballots for actual use in the election, and 180 sets of election supplies, one to each precinct, stamps, pads, and the various paraphernalia of a polling place.

MOTHER'S PRESENCE OF MIND SAVES CHILD

Mrs. Irene Studinger, of Templeton avenue, who was on a shopping trip in San Francisco on Thursday of last week, had the misfortune to be struck by an automobile at Seventh and Market streets, as she alighted from a street car. The automobile was driven by Thomas H. McCreary, of 107 Cayuga street. Mrs. Studinger was pretty well shaken up and bruised, but had the presence of mind to hold on tight to the two-year-old child in her arms. By so doing she in all probability saved its life. Mrs. Studinger was treated at Central Emergency hospital for cuts and bruises.

BOARD APPROVES SEWER PLANS FOR NORTH END TOWNS

The first step toward the establishment of the long-proposed sanitary sewer district in the north end of San Mateo county to provide for disposal of sewage from South San Francisco, San Bruno, Lomita Park and Capuchino into San Francisco bay, was taken by the San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday morning.

Plans and specifications for the sewer system, to cost more than $125,000 according to Mr. Robert A. Klassen, engineer, were adopted by the board. The new district will be known as Acquisition and Improvement District No. 21. Funds will be raised by bond issue.

Jurisdiction in the two incorporated cities, San Bruno and South San Francisco, and approval of the plans and specifications, will be asked of the two city councils at once. The board will then call for bids.

The first move for such a sewer district to solve the problem of sewage disposal in the north end of the county, was made three years ago. Tentative approval was given by all the communities in the proposed district.

Contract for the construction of a road across the dam at the head of Emerald Lake No. 1, west of Redwood City, was awarded to McClure and Chamberlain, of San Francisco. The firm submitted a bid of $19,635. The only other bid was from W. A. Donaville, Salinas, which was $21,904.

A request for an appropriation of $500 to advertise the second annual San Mateo County Fall Flower Festival, to be held at the San Mateo Junior College gymnasium on October 24, 25 and 26, was made by Elmer A. Roberts, president of the Burlingame-San Mateo Garden and Flower Club. The club and the Peninsula Gardeners' Association are sponsoring the show.

The request was referred to the County Chamber of Commerce, out of whose budget the appropriation will be made if favorably recommended.

Irving Hohn of Burlingame, filed application for appointment as state traffic officer.

The Union Paving Company was granted a 90-day extension on the Blossom Heath Manor improvement project, in which to complete assessments.

Dr. H. A. Turner was given a permit to operate a cat and dog hospital on El Camino Real near Redwood City.

The board met in the afternoon to discuss the 1930-1931 county budget. The budget is expected to be completed in the next few days.

STILL DISCOVERED BY LOCAL FIREMEN

Last Sunday night at 8:30 a fire alarm came in from Box 34, Park avenue and Miriam street. Firemen responded and found that the dwelling place at 256 North Park avenue was on fire, the blaze being in the rear of the house.

Fire Chief Kennedy and Officers Hilton and Sunderland broke in the basement door, and to their surprise found a 200-gallon still in operation, and also found an immense quantity of mash.

After the fire had been extinguished Officers Sunderland and Hilton, with the assistance of Fire Chief Kennedy, started to investigate thoroughly, and found a tunnel running from the basement to the key lot in back of the house—a get-away at least 100 feet long and wide enough for a large sized man to crawl through.

Further investigation was continued by Chief Jack Doyle and federal officers. They found that the house belonged to Martin Rognan, residing in San Francisco, and that the house had been rented three months ago to a man named Umberto Scalabini. No one was found on the premises at the time of the fire, however.

During the time the firemen were extinguishing the blaze, Elmer Kennedy, a fireman of Company No. 2, lost a valuable gold watch and chain, which he has not recovered at the present writing.

Six new members were enrolled. A report was read of the District President's meeting. There was a fine attendance for the first meting.

Next Wednesday a board meeting will be held in Mrs. Eva Page's home, on San Diego avenue.

GRACE L. COOPER EARNS AN ENVIABLE REPUTATION

Grace L. Cooper, prior to her election in 1926, served as deputy under the late P. P. Chamberlain for three years, during which time she became familiar with every angle of the work connected with the office. She is capable of correctly and efficiently handling the affairs pertaining to the funds of the county.

Born in San Mateo county, Mrs. Cooper has lived here all her life. She is a member of the well known Lawrence family, and her father, W. H. Lawrence, and brother, W. B. Lawrence, were prominent in county affairs for many years.

Her obliging and courteous treatment of the hundreds of persons who have business at the Treasurer's office have made many friends for Mrs. Cooper, and they are now among those who are supporting her for re-election.

She asks for your favor at the primary election on her record.

GEORGE KNEESE CONCEDED OVERWHELMING MAJORITY

With San Mateo county's intensive political campaign fast nearing the primary next Tuesday, County Surveyor George A. Kneese, seeking re-election, is gaining strength so rapidly that his relection in the primary is being conceded even in the camps of the opposition. Not content with mere victory, however, his thousands of friends and supporters throughout the county are planning to give him an overwhelming majority.

Perhaps no official of San Mateo county has had greater opportunity to come directly in contact with the taxpayers and learn at first-hand their needs and the necessity of meeting those needs economically. In every city and community of the county the county surveyor has made direct contacts with the people through the many programs of public improvements he has put across successfully for them.

The efficient manner in which he has handled these improvments and the economies effected in their construction have made County Surveyor Kneese the great throng of friends who are out this week working to bring him back to office so that there many be no change in the present success and popularity of the county surveyor's office.

In speaking of the whole-hearted support which has come to him voluntarily from every section of the county, Mr. Kneese says: "It is highly gratifying to find my friends so eager to return me to the office of county surveyor. Nothing can be more touching than loyalty such as this at a time when it really means something.

"I deeply appreciate the confidence in my administration shown in every part of the county. Conscientious service to the taxpayers of San Mateo county has ever been my goal, and I believe, judging from the great response to my candidacy, that I have achieved some degree of success.

"Twelve years ago I assumed the office of county surveyor and since that time the growth of the county has been nothing short of remarkable. Today we stand far ahead of many of our neighbors, and the United States government has paid us the tribute of being the most progressive municipality in the state. It makes me proud to feel that this should all happen during my administration. I feel that I have had a constructive part.

"We have great plans for San Mateo county's future, and I might say that they are not merely political promises, as my past record will bear out. I ask only that you consider achievement when you go to the polls next Tuesday, disregarding ballyho and smoke-screen claims of those who are unable to find any issue, but who are hungry for public office. Don't permit misrepresentations to mislead you; just compare the records of those asking your support, and I feel confident you will endorse my administration."

The production of a seedless apple, without the semblance of a core, is reported from a farm near Montreal.

Weissgerber Withdraws From Assembly Race

To the Republicans of San Mateo County:

I desire to inform my friends in San Mateo county that I am withdrawing my candidacy and will make no campaign for the office of Assemblyman from this district.

Since my nomination papers were filed important business connections have been made which will require my removal to another part of the state. I have, therefore, sold my property in San Mateo and will no longer be a resident or citizen of San Mateo county.

(Signed.)

What Makes a Good Business Town?

A good business town is created by the complete co-operation of every citizen in supporting the local business, professional and industrial institutions and in furthering the development of all community activities.

Whatever is good for business is also good for the community, for as business profits so the community prospers. It is, therefore, of interest to all of us that ours should be a good business town.

In judging the progress we are making as a business town let us see if we fulfill the following standards:

1. The citizens spend their money at home.
2. The number of business institutions is increasing.
3. There is an active general commercial organization such as a Chamber of Commerce with a high percentage of eligible concerns as members.
4. Business rentals are as low as in competing towns and the premises well kept.
5. The amount of bank deposits and savings deposits increase faster than population growth, and banking interests provide for local borrowers first.
6. A higher than normal increase in population.
7. An increasing railroad business, postal receipts, building construction and real estate transfers.
8. An increasing amount of insurance issued and held.
9. An honest civic administration and fair taxes.
10. Good streets and highways; utility services.
11. Efficient Fire and Police protection.
12. A church-going community—honest and thrifty.

Do we meet the standards in this community? In order to be judged a good business town we must.

Folks, it's good business for all of us to strive to make a Good Business Town of

THE CHRONIC LIVE WIRE

Civic pride and a conscientious performance of community duties characterize the best business men and citizens everywhere. But anything, no matter how commendable on general principals, may be run into the ground.

We have in mind what we have termed the "chronic live wire." He is always a "good fellow," always a booster, always full of "pep" and enthusiasm and always with a grand scheme that won't work. He gladly plays the part of community goat, because he is willing to neglect his own business, if he has any, in order to serve on innumerable commissions, boards and committees supposed to be for the promotion of mass prosperity and thrift.

Nearly every town has such a character. He means well and is fairly useful to everybody and everything, excepting himself and his own family. He is a living example of local patriotism run to seed.

Unfortunately, he becomes so thoroughly wrapped up in optimism that his loses his sense of proportion and often ends in personal bankruptcy through his ambition to be a public benefactor.

Many of us have passed through that stage and some have survived, but hundreds have ruined themselves through trying to carry the entire community burden..

Boost, but don't "bust" yourself doing it.

A member of the Japanese delegation says his people were at a disadvantage at the London parley. It seems that all the nations got the worst of it that time.

The goverment will study drug store methods. Perhaps some day we will have a chief soda-jerker in the cabinet.

Both Baptists and Methodists of Centerville, Ala., decided to hold a picnic instead of praying for rain. It rained.

AN AGE OF WONDERS

In spite of all its seeming evils the age in which we live is the most wonderful the world has ever witnessed. Happy are those, particularly the young, who can grasp its significance. Astounding as the advancement of the last half century has been, it is only a beginning of greater progress yet to come.

Thoughtful persons are doing a service by pointing out to the younger generation the ever expanding opportunities which await their eager brains and hands. What unexplored resources and unknown forces of nature still lie concealed, wanting only the keys which the human mind must supply to unlock their secrets!

Dr. G. W. Truett of Dallas some time ago said: "I had rather live and have my strength and my wits about me for the next twenty-five years than any other five hundred years the world has even seen."

Dr. Edward Mims of Vanderbilt University expressed the same idea in an address to an assemblage of teachers, saying: "I had rather be a teacher for the next twenty-five years than to be anything else at any other time in all the history of the world."

While this wonderful age and the still more wonderful years to follow present great opportunities, they also involve equally great responsibilities. Are the youth of today making adequate preparations to meet them? This question should engage the serious attention of every young person, as well as that of those who are charged with their training and developement.

Sir John Orme, of Wickford, Eng., who rode one of the first motorcycles ever manufactured, is still riding them at the age of 74.

Berlin has a dog cemetery containing some monuments which cost as much as $1,000.

Fifteen shades of rouge are now obtainable in the shops of Paris.

WHEN ONE IS OLD

We are repeatedly told that youth and age are not measured by years alone. Some are old fogies at 30; others have the spirit of youth at 80. How is this?

An article in a recent issue of an educational journal expresses the idea of youth and age better than we could express it, so we quote it in part:

"Youth is not a time of life; it is a state of mind. It is a temper of the will, a quality of the imagination, a vigor of the emotions. Youth means a predominance of courage over timidity, of the appetite of adventure over the love of ease. This often exists in a man of fifty more than in a boy of twenty. Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years. People grow old by deserting their ideals."

John D. Rockefeller, for example, plays golf with zest at the age of 97. Thomas A. Edison is inventing and planning at the age of 83. John R. Voorhis is active as president of the board of elections of New York City at the age of 101.

These and hundreds of others are extremely old in years, but young in spirit. Thus setting a good example for the rest of us.

A TWO-LANGUAGE SCHOOL

We have always been somewhat skeptical about the value of teaching foreign languages in the average public or private school. It has seemed to us that the smattering of foreign tongues thus acquired was not worth the time spent on them.

Our attention has been called to a somewhat different type of school, which seems to have overcome this objection. This is the Market School in Washington, D. C., which is said to employ a real two-language system of education—in English and French.

That is, instruction in school subjects is given in both languages simultaneously. American instructors teach such subjects as English, American history and geography, while native French teachers give instruction in other subjects entirely through the medium of the French language. Reading and conversation in both languages is obligatory. By this method it is claimed that pupils soon learn to converse in French as easily as those reared in French homes.

Anyway, the plan sounds sensible, and it should appeal to those who are genuinely interested in acquiring not merely a superficial knowledge of French, but a practical mastery of that beautiful and expressive language.

EDITORS RENEW PROTEST

In a resolution adopted at the recent national convention held in Milwaukee, the National Editorial Association again went on record in opposition to the goverment's long-standing practice of supplying printed envelopes in competition with private printers. The resolution said, in part:

"Goverment encroachment in the field of business, as represented by the sale of printed envelopes, we again deplore and once more unreservedly condemn. We pledge ourselves to renewed, persistent and continuing effort to correct this, until it shall at last have come to an end."

After suffering from this unfair competition by the Post Office Department for half a century, it is not surprising that the idea of government operation of business enterprises finds little favor among the small town publishers and printers of the country.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

F. A. Miller, editor of the South Bend (Indiana) Tribune, says:

A city in which the business men have such a mental attitude that they cannot unite in an honorable co-operation for their own and their city's benefit is not making and can not make the progress it could and should.

The Rotary organization has as its motto, "He profits most who serves best." That ought to be the motto of every business man. If it were, business would be better, co-operation would be more frequent and more satisfactory, and cities would progress with greater rapidity.

Absence of co-operation spells stagnation. A city is like a business—its main factors must keep everlastingly pushing it to make a success. Co-operation is essential to such business man energy, and it should be unanimous co-operation. It should be that type of co-operation into which every business man, large or small, enters wholeheartedly and determined to win.

The business man in any city knows whether he stands in the way of co-operation. If he does and has self-respect and love for his city, he will right-about-face and become a consistent and persistent co-operator.

Reapportionment of Congressmen is not causing any great public excitement. And if each state should lose two Senators it would not be anything to worry about.

Night baseball may make it unnecessary for the office boy to attend so many of his grandmother's funerals.

A VICTIM OF HARD LUCK

We have just read again a real and absolutely true hard luck story. It concerned a young man who was handicapped to begin with by being awkward, homely and almost uncouth. He was ambitious, however, and ran for the Illinois legislature, but was badly beaten.

Then he went into business with a worthless partner; failed and spent 17 years in paying off his debts. In the meantime he was engaged to a beautiful young woman, who died.

Nothing daunted, he ran for Congress and was defeated. An effort to obtain a goverment appointment ended in failure. Aiming still higher he ran for the United States Senate, but agan his ill luck persisted and he lost. He also failed in his attempt to obtain the nomination for Vice-President of the United States.

At one time of his life he contemplated suicide, but soon recovered his iron nerve and pressed on.

By this time the reader who knows his history may have guessed the name of this apparently hopeless victim of Fate, who finally won success, and whose name is enshrined in the hearts of his countrymen.

It was Abraham Lincoln.

TEETH BECOME "EARS"

Through an invention recently exhibited by Dr. Frederick Bedell, professor of physics at Cornell University, a great many persons who are supposed to be deaf can hear music satisfactorily through their teeth.

Briefly described, the apparatus used is a special phonograph receiver, terminating in a metal disc, against which one end of a stick of wood is placed, the other end being held lightly between the listener's teeth.

The sound vibrations pass directly to the auditory nerves through the teeth and jawbones, even though the eardrums have been destroyed. Of course, destruction of the auditory nerves themselves would forever preclude hearing, but many cases of deafness result merely from defects in the outer ear. In such cases Dr. Bedell's invention would make hearing possible.

An idea advanced in connection with the new device is that the special transmitters might be placed near a radio or phonograph, or even attached to the seats of a talkie picture theater. The deaf listener could provide himself with the necessary wooden stick and "listen in" at his pleasure, using his teeth as normal persons use their ears.

There would even be some advantage in such a procedure. The listeners would not be annoyed by the irrelevant remarks and alleged wit of "back seat" auditors.

VOTE FOR JAMES ROLPH

The time is near at hand when the people will decide who will be the next governor of California. Are you going to vote for one you never saw, about whom you actually know very little, or are you going to put your faith and trust in a man that you know, one that had the time during his campaign to come to your home town and meet you face to face?

If you had a business of your own that you wished to do well, you would not turn to a stranger to put him at the head of it. On the other hand, you would seek the one you knew and trusted most to run your business for you. So it is with the governorship of your great state. You will decide upon your neighbor and friend, and that is James Rolph, the mayor of San Francisco for nearly twenty years.

As mayor he has to carry on vast enterprises involving the expenditure of many millions of dollars. He has done this, contending all the time with wily schemers, very anxious to get away with a little easy money. Was there ever during his long administration even the shadow of suspicion over any part of his financial management?

He played the game honestly and above board, always taking into counsel the rank and file, the common people, doing what they wanted, and they guarded him against the grafters so well that for a score of years the great city of San Francisco has been free from shameful scandal. That is just a trifle more than can be said for a number of other cities.

Having ruled his city so successfully, it is eminently just that he should be promoted to the higher office of governor. He has asked you for this promotion and he has a right to expect that you will give it to him, at the Primary, almost unanimously. He has visited each and every one of the fifty-eight counties of the state, and in every locality he met with cheering support.

Vote for him because he is well qualified and trustworthy. Vote for his because he is liberal and human in his makeup and in all his official acts. Vote for him because he is free from the control of bosses or any corporation or organization. Vote for him because your state needs a man like James Rolph for governor.

JAMES S. JAMES

TO THE VOTING CITIZEN:

DO YOU KNOW that, by taking advantage of the laxity of the laws, there has been built up in our COUNTY COURT HOUSE an ENGINEERING MONOPOLY which has brought the Office of COUNTY SURVEYOR into competition with the PRIVATE ENGINEER in San Mateo County—a system which is fundamentally and ethically wrong?

DO YOU KNOW that at the present time the private business of the incumbent Surveyor greatly exceeds the work he does for the COUNTY—both County and private work being performed by the same crews—both utilizing the facilities of the Office of the County Surveyor?

IT IS A FACT that, while the fees for the private business so conducted are paid by separate cities, towns, assessment districts and individuals, THE COUNTY IS SUPPLYING THIS PRIVATE ORGANIZATION WITH FREE RENT, LIGHT, HEAT, OFFICE SPACE, ETC.—AND THIS HAS BEEN GOING ON FOR TWELVE YEARS.

MY PLEDGE TO THE VOTERS OF SAN MATEO COUNTY.

I will conduct the affairs of the County Surveyors' office with the same efficiency and economy that apply to the engineering departments of all MODERN BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS.

I will entirely segregate private engineering from County engineering and CONFINE THE USE OF COUNTY OFFICES STRICTLY TO COUNTY BUSINESS, thereby eliminating competition between the County and private engineers.

I will devote my entire time to the duties of the office, with the conviction that only through such procedure will the best interests of the taxpayers and citizens of the county be served.

JAMES S. JAMES.

FIRST TOWNSHIP
SAN MATEO COUNTY

Primary Election, August 26, 1930

Connie Mack told radio listeners recently that Ty Cobb is the greatest baseball player of all times. Ty reciprocated by saying that Connie is the world's peerless manager. Usually such expressions of mutual admiration should be taken with a grain of salt, but in this case a majority of fans will probably agree with these distinguished knights of the diamond.

Rev. Billy Sunday does not believe in mixing politics and religion too much, judging from his recent remark: "Some of our church pillars would not be so noisy in politics and so quiet in religion if God owned their mouths."

Old English Law Made Churchgoing Compulsory

Golfers, picnickers, Sunday autoists would be out of luck if an old English law were in force today. The act of uniformity, 1552, required:

"All persons, except those dissenting from the worship or doctrines of the Church of England and usually attending some place of worship not belonging to the Church of England, are, if they have no lawful or reasonable excuse for absence, to endeavor to attend their parish church or accustomed chapel, or, if reasonably prevented from so doing, some other place where the divine service of the Church of England is performed, on all Sundays and other days ordained and used to be kept as holy days, and to abide there orderly and soberly during the time of common prayer, preaching or other divine service there performed."

Failure to observe this law renders the offending "parishioner or inhabitant of a parish" who is not legally exempt from attendance at divine service on Sundays and holy days "liable in proceedings taken against him in the ecclesiastical courts to be censured for the offense, admonished as to its attendance in the future, and to be condemned in the costs of the proceedings."

Showing General Knox in Diplomatic Light

One thing about the World war: little or nothing has been said about the soldiers going hungry. In this department, at least, the old hardships seemed to have been successfully eliminated. In contrast, one recalls Washington at Valley Forge.

The plight of the Continental army became so desperate that Washington finally sent General Knox and Captain Sargeant to explain their condition to congress.

It will be remembered that General Knox was very generously proportioned and it happened that Captain Sargeant was far from wearing tatters. One member of congress noted this and remarked that in spite of the tale of starvation and rags he had seldom noted a gentleman so fat and one so well dressed.

"It is true," said General Knox, "for out of respect, the choice was made of the only man who had an extra ounce of flesh and the only one who had a whole suit of clothes."

She Picked on Him

The wheels of the divorce mill were grinding out a heavy grist in court when a young man presented his plea for a divorce on the grounds that his wife had been unnecessarily cruel to him.

Asked to describe the specific cruelty by the justice presiding, the libelant, in somewhat of an effeminate voice, declared spiritedly: "She hit me, she beat me, she hurled missles at me," and so on.

The evidence concluded, the judge leaned over to his clerk and in an aside which was audible to quite a few others in the courtroom, inquired:

"Is there any request in this libel for the libelant to resume his maiden name?"—Brockton Enterprise.

His Eyes Cried for Daddy

A little three-year-old boy, very much a daddy boy, was left at home when the father went out of town for a few days. Sunday came and the mother took the small boy to church with her, providing the usual amusements—paper, pencils and pictures.

Everything went well until the brief pause that just precedes the sermon. Then a small hand patted the mother's arm to attract attention and a grave little face, with trembling lips and burning eyes, was raised to hers as a baby voice piped: "Mother, I'm afraid these eyes are going to cry for daddy." And they did.—Indianapolis News.

Surveyor's Work

A geodetic survey is one which covers large areas and takes into account the fact that the earth has a curved surface. It is usually called a control survey, because it furnishes geographic positions and other data for more detailed local surveys. In ordinary surveying, the earth's curvature is ignored, and points of equal elevation above sea level are treated as being plane. This is satisfactory for a local survey, but when several independent local surveys are brought together their lines are quite apt not to fit unless each survey has been made under a geodetic control survey.

Knew Mother's Habit

Betty Jane's mother had a reputation at the stores and among friends and neighbors for buying things and then returning or exchanging them. One morning Betty Jane's father took her in to see her baby brother, who had arrived the night before. She was very much pleased with the baby and asked numerous questions about it and then said: "I think he is lovely and wish we could keep him, but I know mother will send him back because they forgot to make him some teeth."

Shells for Shaving

Shaving, originally, was a symbolic act denoting that the person was in mourning or under a vow. It had nothing to do with a man's appearance. Oyster shells were the first razors, their natural edge smoothed and sharpened by polishing and friction.

KNEESE INTERESTS YOUNG IN CROSS COUNTY HIGHWAY

San Mateo's cross county highway, forming an important link in the proposed new highway from San Joaquin to the Sea, seemed much nearer following a conference between Governor C. C. Young and County Surveyor George Kneese. County Surveyor Kneese met the Governor in Burlingame, where the executive came to make an address.

The county surveyor talked with Governor Young about the possibility of the state taking over the cross-county highway in San Mateo county. This highway will run from San Mateo over to the coastside, linking the bay side with the beaches on the ocean side and eventually forming the last section of the highway from the San Joaquin valley.

County Surveyor Kneese cited to the Governor the great need of this road in the development of San Mateo county's beaches and coastside, and told him that all of the county was interested in its early construction.

The Governor assured Kneese that he would give the matter his prompt attention and do everything he could to have the State Highway Commission make a survey of the proposed route from San Mateo over the coastside just as quickly as funds were available for this purpose. He said that he would also use his influence to have enough money set aside to start this work in the very near future.

After the conference with Governor Young, County Surveyor Kneese said that he was well pleased with the Governor's attitude regarding the development of the San Mateo county beaches by the construction of the cross-country highway.

"The Governor was greatly impressed when I explained to him the great need of this highway and how much it meant to the future of San Mateo county," the County Surveyor said. "I explained that development of our beaches had been greatly retarded due to the lack of good highways linking the coast with the bay side. He looked with great favor on my suggestion that he have the Highway Commission make an early survey of this route, and he assured me that he would do everything he could to get construction of this link started first.

"Aside from road matters, the Governor paid high tribute to our county. He cited its remarkable growth and the fact that it led the state in gains according to the census reports. He told me that our highways were among the finest in the state, and that our communities were as modern and progressive as he had seen anywhere in the West. He predicted a great future for San Mateo county," the county surveyor concluded.

McGOVERN WILL BE ELECTED CORONER

It is the custom in San Mateo county to recognize faithful performance of public duties by returning the incumbent of a particular office for another term and so it is that the friends of Coroner J. C. McGovern are in a buoyant mood over the outcome of the election next Tuesday. Dr. McGovern has carried out the functions of his important position according to the best traditions of our county and there is not the least danger, a thorough canvass shows, but that he will roll up a great vote at the Primary.

Dr. McGovern is a native of the county and as his legion of well wishers are aware has for years been active in all forward movements in the community. He is of the type that leaves no stone unturned whenever the opportunity presents itself to give a big impetus to progress.

The Coroner is much heartened by the reports from every section of the county. Over along the beach, in the northern districts, down toward Menlo Park, from all parts come the same encouraging messages.

"Dr. McGovern going strong here. Vote will be heavy. Deserves election and we are doing everything in our power to ensure it to our friend."

That is the spirit that wins.

In the few hours remaining before the Primary see to it that all your neighbors have heard of the worth of Coroner McGovern and are planning to cast their ballots for him.

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist. Her sister, Lillian, urges her to break off the affair, but Ernestine refuses. A runaway marriage follows. Loring Hamilton wins Lillian's consent to become his wife. Will and Ernestine begin their married life in humble surroundings. John Poole, Will's best friend, gives a birthday party for Ernestine at Ruby Pastano's resort. Ernestine and Will have their first quarrel as a result. Will's father dies suddenly. Lillian and Loring are married.

CHAPTER VII

The Baby for Passenger

Lillian was in Europe. Mamma and papa and grandmother had gone to Langley lake for the month of August. Ernestine entered into a period of waiting, of passing through days of unreality and nights of patient endurance. Sometimes, waking after she had slept, she looked about the walls of the little room with a feeling of enormous surprise. Was this really she, Ernestine Briceland, in this dim room, with the curtains pinned back to admit any vagrant breeze, listening with her heart suddenly quick in the still night for her husband's footsteps?

Mr. Poole came often to visit them. Ernestine began to look for him for late Sunday breakfast. And the Pastanos were kindness itself. Their shining car, with the swart grinning chauffeur, was often at the door.

One day as Ernestine sat reading aloud, Will's mother laid a swollen, creased hand out over the book, and Ernestine, looking up at her, smiled quickly and kissed her.

"What is it, mother?"

They talked a little about the coming baby, and the plans Ernestine and Will had made.

"It is hard for your mother," said Mrs. Todd, with a smile. "I think perhaps it is as great a mistake to be stiffnecked about favors as it is be greedy."

"Perhaps," admitted Ernestine. "It is hard to be exactly balanced. One must choose a direction in which to lean."

They fell into a friendly silence. After a little, Will's mother pressed Ernestine's hand.

"About Will—" she said and hesitated, and Ernestine's heart beat a little faster.

"Be patient with him. He hasn't found himself yet. But he will. You are more mature than Will. Children will increase the distance between your wisdom and his childishness. Just love him. He'll come home."

Ernestine knew no answer, but the words fell into her heart as though there were more significance to them than their stereotyped importance. For an hour or more they sat in silence, Ernestine dreaming of, Mrs. Todd remembering, Will!

Mrs. Todd lived just long enough to see her grandson and to kiss his poppy silk cheek. Will laid him in the hollow of her arms, but after a moment, with a word of entreaty, she asked him to take the baby away. He did so and, calling the nurse to his mother, who seemed to be swooning, he took the little one back to Ernestine.

And so the parlor of the little house was a bower for death. The gray coffin, the room filled with flowers, the worn-out shell of the woman Ernestine had understood so little.

Will acepted his mother's death with more philosophy than Ernestine had expected of him. The long waiting, the clinging, had been harder for him than the final separation. Besides, the new little life cuddled against Ernestine's heart was so much more than any loss—it was such an appropriate compensation.

The baby had finally established Ernestine among her new neighbors. Slowly but surely they had come to respect her, and now, with Peter in her arms, with her house clean and by her own efforts, she found Mrs. Schluss and Mrs. Pryor and others showing her real affection, which she appreciated and respected in full. Ernestine felt that all sacrifice was justified, and they entered into a new phase of life, in their own small home, Will at the oars, Ernestine at the helm, and the baby for passenger.

* * * * * * *

It was harder to maintain the high level of contentment after Lillian returned from Europe and established herself in her new home on the road, out near Loyola. Will went across with Ernestine one noon shortly after their return. Mamma was there. Lillian was charming to Will, kissing him when she greeted Ernestine and the baby and flattering him skilfully.

After Will had left for the Sun the three women followed one another about the house, passed the baby back and forth between them, and talked, talked, talked, all at the same time, all listening and talking, all intent on catching up the old intimacy. It was charming. Ernestine could not remember when she had spent such a happy afternoon. There was no one like mamma—no one!

"I've got to go, because papa is bringing a new stone-merger man home with him for dinner. I am going to put rock powder in the coffee!" Mamma kissed them all goodby, with tears in her eyes.

Ernestine looked at Lillian and realized with a shock how changed she was in the six months since her marriage. She was satisfied with her lot and herself. There was almost danger—a challenge to fate in her complacency. She was gentle and kind to Ernestine, but subtly patronizing. It was especially noticeable since mamma had gone, for mamma kept Lillian in check.

But if Lillian was changed, Loring was startlingly so. He seemed to Ernestine bigger, handsomer. His blond strength was now set in a robust vitality which was very different from Will's volatile excitability. He kissed Ernestine affectionately, told her she looked well and admired the baby.

Mamma had trained a maid for Lillian, and she served in silent competence an excellent dinner, but the bright vivacity of the afternoon was gone. The interwoven volubility of the three women, their constant interruption of one another, their exclamations and cries of astonishment or sympathy, now disappeared, and Loring talked and the two girls listened.

He assumed Ernestine knew all about their European journey. Over there, he said, he had got a new slant on things. It was a good thing for a man to get away from his desk for a while. Now he had decided to forego the idea of the bench and go in for crime.

They laughed and he twinkled at them, but all the same, he insisted, he meant it.

"The judiciary qualities are excellent, but not remunerative—unless one becomes a corrupt judge, from which fate Heaven deliver me! The criminal lawyer is the important lawyer of today. He is the man with power in the courts. It will be a new kind of litigation for our office, but if I can get the business I can handle it. I went to see that Greek chap—Pastano—this afternoon, and recalled to him our acquaintanceship and our mutual friends. He remembered me perfectly and asked about you. He seems much interested in you and Will. He's the man to see, Tom Kelly told me, at the City hall. He has the say about all that Clark street colony. There's no end of money there and I'm going to dig some of it out for us."

Ernestine's face was flushed. She could not deny her anger.

"But it seems inconsistent to me," she said quickly, "for you to take advantage of his friendship for Will when you disapprove so of our knowing him. I don't understand."

"What has friendship got to do with business?" Loring asked, and his own face flushed with resentment. "I tell you I've got to make new contacts if we're to bring a different kind of clientele into the office. Besides, I didn't disapprove of Will knowing him. It was only his taking you to that dive. Do you think I would mix Lillian up with that crowd?"

"I can't see any grand difference," retorted Ernestine. "Lillian isn't a baby. She's your wife, anyhow. Besides, the Pastanos are all right—all of them. I know them well, and the two girls are as fine as any I have met. There's not a month passes that we don't visit them, or they don't call. Mr. Pastano admires Will. He once hurt my feelings, and he's been making it up ever since. We've been friends without asking about his political activities or how he makes his money."

"It's all very well for you to take an attitude with me," declared Loring, "but I've come home with the determination to make money—and a lot of it. Chicago is rich. I may as well take some of it as others. And if an acquaintance with a powerful man like Pastano falls to my luck, I'll pursue it. Will would want me to."

"Will would," admitted Ernestine, but her looks were cold. "You've changed, Loring. You used not be so—ambitious."

"I've acquired a new sense of values," he admitted. "Of course I'm not saying at all that a man should stick at nothing to make money. That's a mistake, and no good anyhow. But I've been around—I saw one thing everywhere. It is the passion for the possession of money—as much as a man can lay hands on."

"Don't be silly, Loring," said his wife mildly. "Look how happy Ernestine is, and she's as broke as broke."

"I am happy," declared Ernestine.

"Yes," admitted Loring, "but that is because your capacity for happiness is great. Your pleasure in your marriage and your child wouldn't be spoiled at all by more comforts."

"I don't want anything changed."

"Not now—not at this moment. But if you'll be honest with yourself, you'll find that one reason for your contentment is your great expectations for the future. You feel that your condition is only temporary. Come now, Ernestine—isn't that so? You are confident that there will be money for you and Will, when Peter grows older, and Will's work develops into more importance. Being poor can be a game if it's only an interlude. But if you had to look forward to nothing else—"

The truth of his logic hurt Ernestine unbearably.

"I don't care whether Will ever makes money or not," she declared passionately, almost in tears.

"You think you don't," said Loring inexorably. "But Will wouldn't say that. Every man wants money—every woman wants her man to have it. It's a symbol of power. If Will doesn't get it he'll feel that he's failed your confidence in him."

Ernestine found herself trembling.

Lillian picked the baby up and dandled him and spoke quietly to Loring. "You are disturbing Ernestine and it isn't a bit nice of you. All this shouting makes me wonder if you doubt your own ability."

She took the baby and put him in his mother's arms.

Loring apologized.

"It's a bad habit I have—arranging my own thought in an argument. It dosn't mean a thing—sophistry pure and simple. I know you are sincere, Ernestine. Don't pay any attention to me."

The talk fell into safer lines, but Ernestine was no longer happy. Loring got out his car, and, with Lillian and Ernestine in the back seat with the sleeping baby, he drove to her home. They left her now as they had left her in Erie street, disrupted, unhappy and at odds with Will.

She was awake when Will came in, and she fixed a light supper for him and told him all that Loring had said, with some small editing.

"He's a capable lawyer, I suppose," Will said. "And if Ruby wants to give him work to do, and Loring wants to do it, what's the difference? He's not the only lawyer that would like to get his fingers into Pastano's pie. But anyhow, I've got something to tell you. Underwood's going to New York, and Tucker's to be head of the art room."

Ernestine felt a cruel shock of disappointment. She knew Will had expected this—had hoped for the job himself.

"But Tucker's so young," she protested.

"It isn't that—he's capable. I'm glad he got it," said Will.

Ernestine thought of what this job might have meant. The pay was nearly double. They could have rented this house and, with the rent and the increase, moved into an apartment in Ravenswood.

"Oh," she cried to Will, aghast at her own mental processes. "It's so hard not to consider money. Not to want it! Not to care! I don't want to be greedy and grabby. I don't want to crave success. But I am—I do. Isn't it horrible?"

He looked at her with some humor.

"You aren't greedy and grabby, sweetheart. And as for success, there's a legitimate way to want that—not for the money but for the work. I don't think this has any effect on my future. It's really an executive position, and I'm a solitary worker. I'd be no good at bossing. It's an editorial job, and Tommy has an editorial slant on things. He's fitted for it."

A few days later he came home with a shining face.

"I'm to be Poole's assistant," he said. "Do you realize what this means to me? It's worth ten thousand in cash—to work under him. If a person went to him and offered a hundred dollars a lesson, he wouldn't teach him to draw, but would curse him out of the office. And he'll teach me, and I'll be paid for it. It means no more night work. Ten till six. I do detail in the art room until Mr. Poole comes in and then I work for him all afternoon. He does a copy for a New York syndicate every day, and there's always work to plan ahead and sketches to lay out. He's been boozy a lot lately, and I think McDermott feels that if he has somebody to help him he'll keep ahead and not run so close to publication. Wiston didn't want to send me in there—but Poole insisted on me." He sighed with happiness and added, as an afterthought, "It means another five-dollar raise—maybe more later."

He was so thrilled and excited that Ernestine commanded her heart to yield its disappointment over Tommy's job. But she could not see any real future for Will in losing himself in the great man's shadow.

* * * * * * *

"I don't want mamma to know," Ernestine said. "I'm afraid she won't go to Europe. Besides, you know what a fuss there'll be."

"Then don't tell her," said Will in his simplicity. "It isn't really any one else's business, is it?"

Ernestine sighed. "You don't know how they'll take it. Of course it's their business—they'll have enough to say. And I feel embarrassed with mamma. She'll wonder why I didn't tell her."

Will kissed her cheerfully and went away to his beloved job. He was radiantly happy and his happiness seemed to affect her inversely. Every day was an adventure to him.

"Tommy gives me plenty to do," he admitted one evening. "Tommy's a good boss. He keeps us all humping, and gives every fellow the kind of job he can do best. But it's the work for Mr. Poole that makes up for any chores. Ernestine, I tell you he is a great man. He comes in there—sometimes he doesn't know whether he's eaten or not, but as soon as he gets in that little office, which fits around him like a glove about a hand, he begins to function—the way his mind works is always a surprise. What's the matter, honey?—you're not eating."

Ernestine leaned on her hand and her eyes filled with tears.

"I hate to have mamma go away now," she said.

Will's methods were infantile.

"Then tell her. You know she'd stay in a minute."

"Go on talking about the office, please—so I can think."

Will laughed. He took a half-dollar from his pocket and spun it on the kitchen tablecloth.

"I won me fifty cents, shooting craps at the office," he said. "We can go to the movies."

Ernestine plucked the fifty-cent piece from his fingers, and he made a pretense at regaining it.

"Now my thinking process is entirely disrupted," she told him. "I thought Mr. Wiston was going to fire the next person he caught shooting craps in office hours."

"I don't believe he'll do it," said Will comfortably, and Ernestine did not believe it either. The men were always matching pennies or rolling dice or making up pools.

Will pushed back his chair, came around and cupped Ernestine's face in his hands, kissed her cheeks and lips and pressed her eyelashes down hard with his caresses.

"Don't be blue, honey—don't worry," he bade her cheerfully. "You're the prettiest, sweetest woman in the world. It's natural for us to have a family. You're not going to be unhappy about the new baby, are you, Ernestine? It's the way of love."

"I know," she said. She drew him down and kissed him. But her face was strangely sad. "Nothing can make me unhappy, Will, as long as we love each other. I get hurt because we go for weeks without seeing my family—I seem to be drifting away from them. Mamma and Lillian are always so busy, and papa is in New York. And I get proud and avoid them on my part. But as long as we have our love for each other—this oneness—it's the best thing in life—what can we lack?"

He picked her up, sat down in his mother's little rocker, cradled her, sang silly songs in her ear and teased her. But after a little while he was talking about the office again, and she was resting against him, entirely inattentive, her thought on her own affairs.

CHAPTER VIII

Will and Loring

Loring succeeded in securing for Ruby Pastano the deed and title to the old LeQuinne place in the restricted colony at Langley lake. Ernestine was filled with indignation that he should do such a thing.

"Mamma won't like it at all," she told Lillian. "LeQuinne's land runs right down to ours with nothing but Stone creek between the two places. You know how it will be with the Greeks there. The house will simply be bursting with visitors all summer. They will have speed boats, and there will be children in the water from morning till night."

"But I thought you liked them," protested Lillian. "You are friends of theirs. Mrs. Pastano is so happy about it, I thought you would be delighted, and so did Lorrie. In fact he counted on your help in calming mamma if she objected."

Ernestine shook her head.

"He can do his own calming. It's plain to me that Loring's ideas differ from ours. Will and Ruby Pastano are real friends, yet Will would never have thought of selling that place to Ruby. He fits into his own place, in Chicago, but he won't fit in there. The people—the Hendersons and the Mayces and the O'Tooles won't be kind to them. They'll not belong to the country club, nor be in the tournaments. I suppose it's not my place to worry about it, only I am thinking of mamma."

"Mamma won't go there after this summer, or next. Didn't you know, darling, that this stone-merger thing is going to make papa rich? You know, papa owns altogether nearly seven quarries in Indiana where some of the best limestone is cut, and then he has proxies for the Langley quarries. For the last year he and Lorrie have been buying options and small interests in other quarries. Now they have made a merger. The quarries are worth at their present rating five or six million dollars altogether, but the merger will be worth twenty-five million. Don't you see what it means?"

Ernestine stared at her. "Papa—worth millions?"

Lillian nodded with complacent pride. "Yes, and Loring is getting some of the stock. He is to be counsel for the merger, and he has a holding. You don't need to worry about mamma at Langley lake. I'm going down to open Lake Haven next week. Can't you come with me, instead of waiting for Will's vacation?"

"I don't like to leave Will alone in Chicago, in the heat—" said Ernestine.

"But I am leaving Loring. Are you well, Ernestine?"

"My feet bother me," Ernestine admitted. "I asked Doctor Grey about it, but he didn't say much. He's put me on a diet. I'll be all right."

"I think you ought to stay at Langley lake all summer."

"It would be nice," said Ernestine vaguely, feeling hurt because she had not known about papa, or the stone merger—feeling out of things, "but I want to be with Will."

In July they went to Langley lake, where Lillian was established and where somehow she appropriated the role of hostess, although it was not her house any more than it was Ernestine's. Will refused to worry about the Pastanos living on the point, and Ernestine saw that he lacked her own snobbish prejudices about the lake colony. He took Peter and went to visit the Greeks the first morning he was there, and stayed all day, romping with the young Pastanos, teasing Alexandria, who adored him, and eating Madame Pastano's pickled fish.

Press Agents Unknown to Medieval Writers

"A striking feature of medieval literature is its general anonymity," writes W. H. Schofield in "English Literature from the Norman Conquest to Chaucer." Of the many who wrote, the names of but few are recorded, and of the history of these few we have only the most meager details. Nor is this a simple accident. Formerly, the importance attached to an author's personality was far less than now. In case either of a narrative or a didactic work, it was the substance above all that attracted attention. Originality of matter was deplored as a fault.

"Independence of treatment meant to our forefathers contempt of authority, a heinous offense in their eyes. It was as unsafe for a story-teller to depart from the well-marked lines of inherited tradition as for him to disregard orthodox beliefs. And even the greatest dared not present new views without at least claiming august support. A prudent author sought a powerful patron in order to insure success, or fathered his inventions on some ancient worthy who could not deny them. But the last thing he would have deemed wise would have been to copyright them as his own."

Ancient Road Builders

The ancient Romans were great road builders and were most active between the second and fourth centuries after Christ. These roads were universally straight and varied in width from eight to fifteen feet, going over hill and valley in spite of grades. Soldiers, slaves and criminals were employed in the construction of these highways, the durability of which is shown by the fact that, in some cases, they have sustained the traffic for 2,000 years without material injury. The Roman forum is said to have been the point of convergence of 24 roads, which, with branches, had a total length of 52,904 Roman miles. The Romans are said to have learned the art of road building from the Carthaginians.

Newspaper "Stock"

There are four commercial processes of making paper pulp from wood. They are known as the groundwood, the sulphite, the sulphate, and the soda processes. Each is especially adapted to the manufacture of certain grades of paper or to the pulping of certain woods. News, cheap magazine and cheap catalogue papers are made mostly of groundwood—that is, of uncooked wood mechanically ground into a pulp. The groundwood process is the cheapest of all the pulping processes, and the pulp yield is by far the greatest. The quality of the pulp, however, is so low that even in cheap papers it is not strong enough to use alone, and considerable quantities of longer and stronger fibered pulp must be added.

Do Bees Know Beekeeper?

One often hears the statement that bees know their master. This is not true. During the working season a bee lives for only about six weeks, two of which are spent in the hive. It is hardly likely that a beekeeper would examine a hive frequently enough to become known to such short-lived creatures even if they had the ability to distinguish between different human beings.

Women $1.60 Per Dozen

If you had been at Bethel Full Gospel Mission last Sunday night you could have found out just where you can buy women at this price, and you could have found out lots of other things besides.

Brother Angiel, a native of Burma, brought the message to us last Lord's Day evening. He is an ex-Buddhist and over 80 years old, but he is just as full of fire for the Lord Jeusu Christ as any young person that the writer knows of.

In Burma the chief religion is that of Buddha, and just as the boys of the European countries are conscripted for the armies of their country, so the boys of Burma are conscripted to the temples of Buddha. When Brother Angiel was just a boy of five years, his mother took him to the Buddist temple. His teacher was a priest 75 years old. Every time he made a mistake in his studies this priest would knock him off his stool, maybe take his rice away so he would have nothing to eat, or take his mat away so that he had to sleep on the bare ground. These temples wre just like a prison. Each pupil had a cage in which he was locked all the time until he graduated.

Women in Burma are nothing. They can not even sit and eat with the men folk, nor can they get any education, because it is figured they are not worth the trouble. It is quite easy to see that, because you can buy them at $1.60 a dozen. You women folk who read this can thank God you were born in a land of Christianity, where women command every respect from man.

A Buddhist believes in reincarnation, and will kill no living thing, for fear that they will come back to earth in the form of the creature they have killed. Hence over 40,000 are killed annually by snakes alone, they fearing to kill snakes lest they come back to this earth in the form of a snake. Such is the superstition of these people.

Brother Angiel was saved twenty-seven years ago in Chicag, and just as soon as he found Christ himself, he thought of his mother and brothers and sisters back in Burma. He wrote his mother of the joy he had found in Jesus, and then took the boat to go to her. She had had no education, like the rest of the women, but had bought a bible written in the Burmese language and had it read to her. She did not fully understand God's plan of salvation, but she knew that it was something far better than she had in the Buddhist religion, and when her son was due to arrive, she traveled 486 miles through country infested by wild animals and snakes to meet him and learn more of the Savior who had done so much for him. The mother saw the transformation in her son, and right away accepted Jesus as her Savior.

Dear friends of Daly City, you do not have to travel that far. Our Mission is right in your midst. We can show you the way to happiness. We can show you how to put a smile on your face, no matter how long it has been since you smiled, if you will only let us. There is only one way to happiness and satisfaction, and that is the way of Jesus. Why not come and let us show you the way. Brother Angiel will be with us Saturday night again, and he will tell more about his past life in Burma and his present happiness in Christ. Come and hear him.

KEEP JIM McGRATH IN THE SHERIFF'S OFFICE

Jim McGrath is going to stay in the sheriff's office.

That is the cheering news we hear on every hand. The men and women of all sections of our great county have come to a realization that Sheriff "Jim" is the right man in the right place, and they intend to keep him where he has been these last few years. The opportunity to show "Jim"—for the immensely popular official is "Jim" to the thousands of his adherents—what they think of him and the able manner in which he has carried on the duties of his office is coming Tuesday, August 26. All indications are a record-breaking vote will be polled for the Sheriff at the primary coming on that August day.

The strength of character requisite in a man holding the office of sheriff is possessed by our chief of the county constabulary, and, what is more, his personal magnetism and innate kindness set him apart from the typical officer. To know Jim is to be for him. Strangers are won over to him at the first meeting. It is not stretching matters to say that "Jim" is a real asset to the county.

That Sheriff McGrath understands thoroughly the duties of his office has been demonstrated time and time again. When he has business on hand he is all business. He knows he has a public to serve and all his energy is bent in giving that service.

Well deserved was the recent praise accorded to "Jim" McGrath by District Attorney Franklin Swart. In discussing a case of wide public interest, the District Attorney was quoted in the press as saying:

"Sheriff McGrath and his staff have done excellent work in this case and deserve high commendation. The sheriff has been of invaluable assistance to us in untangling this case."

District Attorney Swart knows his onions, as the colloquialism has it, and whatever he says should have the greatest weight.

The best of luck to you, Sheriff "Jim."

CAPABLE OFFICIAL SHOULD BE RETAINED

Such a flourishing community as our own is fortunate in having the services of able and altogether conscientious officials. High on the list of office holders who can be commended is George A. Kneese, County Surveyor. That capable official has served the pepole for twelve years, and his re-election is imperative in order that the important work now under way should be continued.

The recent census has demonstrated that our county has outstripped the other counties of our state in increase of population, and industrial and commercial development. In order to care for this increase, and to provide for the new streets, sewers, highways, traffic necessities, good engineering thought and arganization was necessary to keep pace with our rapid development. We have had this.

"Don't swap horses in mid-stream" is an ancient saying, but a true one. So we say do not change from an official who has been conducting the county's business in an efficient manner for a protracted period. It is difficult, indeed, to find just the kind of man that fills the bill and when the man luckily has been found, do not throw him over.

Progress of our rich county depends to a great measure on the carrying out of the duties of the office of Surveyor. In communities growing by leaps and bounds, as is San Mateo county, problems relating to highways, street improvements, transportation facilities, and other pressing matters, must be solved in a thoroughly competent manner.

As the Surveyor has been a resident of this county since boyhood, he is conversant with its growth in every respect. Pride that comes from long familiarity with the needs of one's own county is possessed by Mr. Kneese to a high degree.

Able lieutenants are necessary in every line of work, and in that regard the Surveyor is particularly effective. He has built up a staff which "can't be beat" anywhere. Economical efficiency is the watchword all through the ranks.

County Surveyor Kneese has made good, fellow citizens, and now it is your privilege to return him to his important post. The time is Tuesday, August 26, and the place—your voting booth.

CITIES SEEK "FIRE" JOKER

Police of seven San Mateo county cities are seeking a "practical joker." For several nights fire departments have been receiving false alarms. The latest victims have been Burlingame, Redwood City and Menlo Park. At midnight a box rang at Redwood City. Apparatus was rushed to the location, but no blaze could be discovered.

Anthony Fokker, famed designer and builder of some 40,000 airplanes, and head of General Motors' aviation staff, ran across his first woman pupil at a Long Island flying field a few days ago. To celebrate the reunion he took her for a hop and did many fancy stunts while up. Upon landing he was arrested and fined $500 for unlawful landing, because he had no U. S. licence.

Good progress is being made in the electrification of Austrian railways.

Mr. Partridge is the brother of Frank, Edith and the late Charlotte Partridge, of Bellevue avenue and Oliver streets, Daly City. He is also survived by a widow and two daughters and a son. Mr. Partridge was very widely known, having been president for many years of the San Francisco Prevention of Cruelty to Animals society.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or even increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store. Edwards' Drug Store, Mission street, near San Jose avenue. —Adv.
